Occupation: Student

Course: BS Management Information Systems

Location: Quezon City, Metro Manila

He is a 21-year-old college student currently taking up a Bachelor's degree in Management Information Systems at the Ateneo de Manila University. He is also a tech-savvy individual who uses technology to his advantage to manage his schedule and tasks efficiently and effectively.

Frustrations

- Current enlistment process is time-consuming and not user-friendly.
- Wants to have a clear schedule that provides all necessary information that is user-intuitive.
- Lacks a centralized platform to view grades, academic progress, and other relevant student data.

Goals

- Efficiently enlist in courses each semester without hassle.
- Keep track of her daily class schedule, including room assignments.
- Monitor her academic progress and performance via a personalized dashboard.
- Stay informed about campus events, announcements, and important deadlines.

Issue 1: Bad UI & UX

- The current UI of AISIS on a mobile browser is frustrating to many as it looks ancient and Jurassic.
- It is also hard to navigate given that it was not designed to be used in small screen sizes.

Issue 2: Long set-up time for enlistment

- Currently, online enlistment on AISIS requires visiting the website on a browser, logging in your credentials, and agreeing to the terms and conditions before finally being able to enlist.
- A mobile app that can be accessed with one tap may prove to mitigate this issue

Issue 3: No all-in-one Homepage

- To get all the relevant information you need, you have to navigate through multiple links and remember each bits of information to get a gist of your current situation

Challenge 1: Staying within Scope

- When it came to deciding which features should be added, we end up asking ourselves if adding certain features would still be in scope.

Challenge 2: Initial Conceptualization

- What design (font, color, style) should we use?
- How would the layout look like?
